

Priyamani to endorse Aakash 2 Tablet?

Well in early November Priyamani launched the much awaited Apple iPhone 5 in India. Since then it looks like she has created an image for herself amongst gadget lovers particularly. Well, of course her stint with the gizmos could be followed up with an Indian product that is creating ripples in the market.

Reportedly, the actress is on her way to sign her first brand endorsement just like competitors Anushka, Kajal and Tamanna. The product is India's very own Aakash 2 Tablet which is touted as the common man's computer. The device has a market for the youth as it is intended to be distributed in colleges at half the original price.

The actress mentioned, "I have not yet signed on any papers regarding the Aakash deal yet. But I am in talks with the concerned authorities and would like to be part of my first deal as a brand ambassador". Furthermore, the occasion also brought in discussions about her new movie Angulika. It is said the sexy lass has been offered Rs 82 lakh for her 40 days of shooting to do the role of a princess in the movie. Priyamani clarified the rumors instead and disclosed " I would prefer to do a challenging role in my next. My representative has not yet made any official announcements on the movie yet, thank you."
